Numb. 2438

The Daily Gazetteer.

Friday, April 15. 1743.

Extract of a private Letter from Stockholm, April 3. 1743.

IT is owing to the Unsettledness of our Affairs, that the World is more curious about them than usual. We have been long engaged in a Foreign War for Motives scarce known to ourselves, and are now on the Brink of a Civil one, which draws the Attention of our Neighbours.

'The warm Declaration of the Peasants in favour of the Prince of Denmark, alarm'd both the Russian and French Parties so much, that they were forced to have Recourse to some very extraordinary Methods to bring the Members of the Diet to a proper Temper. In the first Place, it was found requisite to appoint a solemn Fast on the 25th, at which all the Orders were to assist, and to hear a Sermon preach'd by a Bishop, from a Text in the First Chapter of Jonas. This was designed to afford the Orator an Opportunity of quieting and softening the Minds of his Audience. But his Eloquence had no such Effect. The Peasants prayed, fasted, and heard the Sermon, without the least Alteration in their Sentiments, so that this Plot proved entirely abortive.

'The Russian Party had Recourse next to the Deputies from Finland, and procured a Declaration from them, That in case the Prince of Denmark should be elected, they were not to expect that the Finlanders, who had actually abandoned their Native Country to shew their inviolable Fidelity to the Swedish Nation, should persist any longer in this Resolution. But so far was this from having the least Influence on the Peasants, that they absolutely declared they were under no Concern about it. For if the Russians were to remain possessed of the Duchy of Finland, they could not see what mighty Advantage Sweden could expect from a Handful of distress'd Refugees. Thus the Second Scheme succeeded no better than the First.

'The next Morning a Motion was made in the Diet, to give an Exclusion to all the present Candidates, viz. the Bishop of Lubeck, the Prince of Denmark, and the Duke of Deux Ponts, since the supporting these Candidates had occasion'd such Heats and Disturbances; and upon agreeing to this Motion, this Member promised to name a Fourth Candidate, to whom none of the Parties could have any plausible Objection. Who that Candidate was, is not certainly known. Some think it was the young Prince of Hesse, and others, the younger Son of a certain crown'd Head. But whoever it was, the Diet absolutely rejected this Proposition, and the Peasants still insisted not only on their Choice, but that the Election should not be postponed any longer. To avoid this, it was proposed by some of the Friends of the Ministry, that the Proposals, and the Pretensions of each of the Candidates, might be fairly stated and examined. To which, as it was in M. Berkentin's Opinion visibly favourable to them, the Peasants consented. By this Contrivance, there was some Time gained, which gave an Opportunity for a Courier to arrive from Finland with Advices of Importance, at least to the Russian Party.

'Upon the 28th there was a very warm Debate in the House of Nobles, to compose which, M. Urban Hieren, one of the Deputies there, made a long and solemn Discourse in Swedish Verse, which is said to have done more than the Bishop's Sermon; since they came immediately to a Resolution, not to be forced on a precipitate Election, but to examine all Things leisurely, and with a due Regard to the Interest of the Publick; which has occasioned the postponing that Affair for a certain time, notwithstanding all the violent Efforts of the Peasants, who since that Disappointment seem to be much tamer than they were.

'Some People pretend to doubt whether the Speech publish'd under the Name of Col. Wrede, was that which he really made in the Diet, or one composed on purpose to influence the People. In it he says, That the Holstein Party are very unjustly reproach'd with being in a Foreign Interest, since, in truth, they alone behav'd like Natives of Sweden. If, says he, you revive the Union of Calmar, or call the Prince of Denmark to the Succession, you become subject to the Dane. If, on the other hand, you elect the Duke of Deux-Ponts, you must depend, as you have done for three Years past, on the French, and in either Case lose Finland. Whereas if you chuse the Bishop of Lubeck, you will be entirely independent, and you will regain that Duchy, which is what cannot be had any other Way. To-morrow the Holstein Minister is to produce his Authorities in support of what he has offered in Favour of his Master, and we shall then know for certain who will be ours.'

LONDON.

Count Traun has demanded 20,000 Pistoles, by way of Free-Gift, from the City of Bologna; and from the Territory of Ferrara 1000 Crowns a Day.

Count Colleredo has enter'd Italy with 4000 Croats; and the Regiment of Andrasi, Infantry, consisting of 3000 Men, was within four Days March of Mantua when the Post came away.

Orders have been given for marching 6000 Hanoverian Troops to the Frontiers of that Electorate, in order (if it should be necessary) to join the Auxiliaries in Germany.

It is believed the next Mail will bring us the Consent of the Province of Zealand to the Proposal of the States of Holland, upon which their High Mightinesses will take their definitive Resolution as to the March of their 20,000 Men.

There are private Letters in Holland which contradict what some of the Gazettes say, as to the Rout of the German Hussars by the Duke d'Atrisco.

On CENSURE.

YE Wise, instruct me to endure
An Evil which admits no Cure
Or how this Evil can be borne
Which breeds at once both Hate and Scorn.
Bare Innocence is no Support,
When you are try'd in Scandal's Court.
Stand high in Honour, Wealth, or Wit;
All others who inferior sit
Conceive themselves in Conscience bound
To join and drag you to the Ground.
Your Altitude offends the Eyes,
Of those who want the Pow'r to rise,
The World, a willing Stander-by,
Inclines to aid a specious Lye.
Alas! they would not do you Wrong,
But all Appearances are strong.
Yet, whence proceeds this Weight we lay
On what detracting People say?
For, let Mankind discharge their Tongues
In Venom till they burst their Lungs,
Their utmost Malice cannot make
Your Head, or Tooth, or Finger ach;
Nor spoil your Shape, distort your Face,
Or put one Feature out of Place;
Nor will you find your Fortune sink,
By what they speak, or what they think;
Nor can ten hundred thousand Lies,
Make you less virtuous, learn'd, or wise.
The most effectual Way to balk
Their Malice, is——to let them talk.

THE Elements of ALGEBRA, in a New and Easy Method; with their Use and Application, in the Solution of a great Variety of Arithmetical and Geometrical Questions, by General and Universal Rules.

To which is prefix'd, An Introduction containing a succinct History of this Science.

By Mr. NATHANIEL HAMMOND, of the Bank.

Extract from the Account of this Book in the Works of the Learned.

'The World has long complained of the Want of a proper 'Introduction to Algebra. Some are so very concise, as if 'they were contrived not to teach but introduce a Teacher; 'others again are larger, but wrote with so little Consideration to the Understandings of such as are altogether unacquainted with the Science, that they are of very little Use 'to those who are most inclined to make use of them. Whence 'it comes to pass, that few find it practicable to make any 'Progress in Algebra without a Master, tho' certainly the Science in itself is far from surpassing a clear Head, and a tolerable Understanding.

'The Design of this Treatise, which is of a reasonable Bulk, 'and which contains nothing which is not solid, and to the 'Purpose, is to assist such as are engaged in teaching Algebra 'with a regular Method, and a large Stock of Examples; so 'that their Scholars may find Employment in their Absence; 'and to enable such as live in Country-Places, and must consequently want all other Tutors, except Books, to acquire 'such a Skill in this Science, as may enable them to spend a 'Portion of their Time agreeably in the Cultivation of their 'better Parts, and in rendering a natural Method of enquiring after Truth habitual.

'The Treatise begins with a copious Explication of the 'Fundamental Principles of the Art, and of the Signs and 'Method of Notation used therein. The Author then proceeds to the several Rules, explaining them carefully and copiously in all their various Cases; so that with a moderate 'Attention it is simply impossible for a Person, who desires to be Master of Algebra, to miss of his End.

'We never find this Writer advancing any thing out of its 'proper Place, or burthening the Mind of his Scholar with 'Rules, before they become necessary: He professes to have 'imitated the judicious Euclid in this Respect; and he has 'done it with equal Art and Felicity. By this means he has 'delivered the young Student in Algebra from that which is 'usually the most fatiguing Part of the Science, viz. The 'Doctrine of Surds, in the Manner in which it is usually 'taught. By the same Means he leads his Reader directly to 'Equations; and, by shewing him the Profit he will reap 'from this Science, encourages him to overcome all its Difficulties. But having thus laid a strong and rational Foundation, he moves more slowly through the rest of his Work, 'that whoever follows him, may be obliged to become Master 'of every Branch of the Art, so as to be a compleat Algebraist, 'before he quits his Book, and not a Smatterer.

'Quadratic Equations, and the Art of managing Converging Series, the admirable Invention of the incomparable 'Newton, are here so clearly explained, and their several Cases so plainly set down, and so thoroughly explicated, that it 'may be truly said, there are no where else such Instructions 'to be met with. At the Close of the Book, we find abundance of Observations, necessary for enlightening such Minds 'as are willing to proceed still farther in analytic Discoveries; 'so that considering the Compass of this Work, and that too 'is very moderate, it is as complete as possibly can be expected: And he who is thoroughly versed in it, will find no great 'Difficulties, when he proceeds to sublimer Studies. The 'Language is plain and natural, the Book is more copious 'than any other in Examples, and the Illustrations of them 'are so full and clear, that it is impossible to mistake their 'Meaning.——
